

Computer Hardware

Class V
lab 5

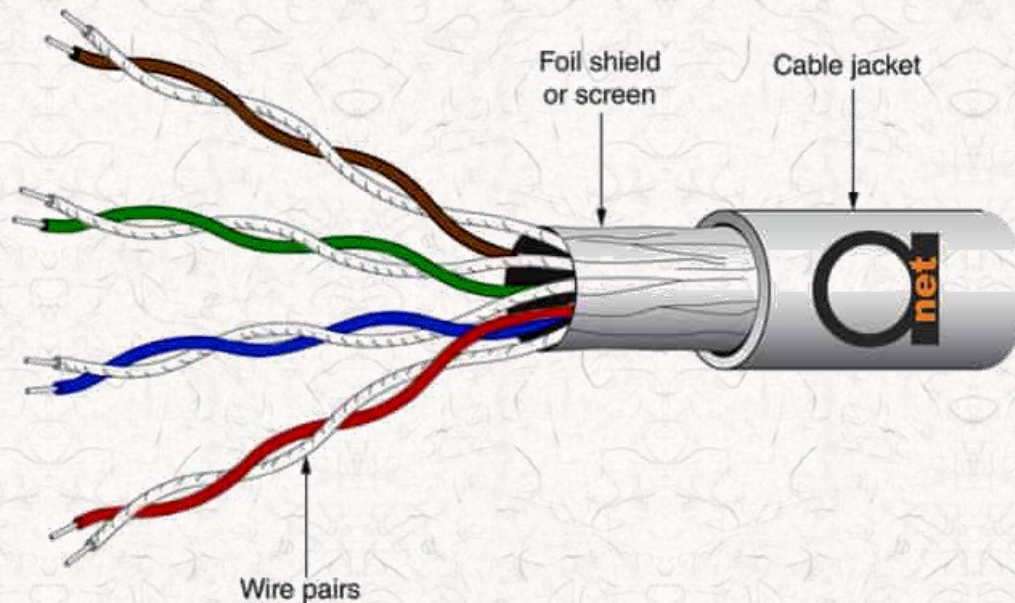

Networking Cables

networking
hardware used to connect one
network device
to other network

Twisted Pair Cables

two independently
insulated wires
twisted around
one another

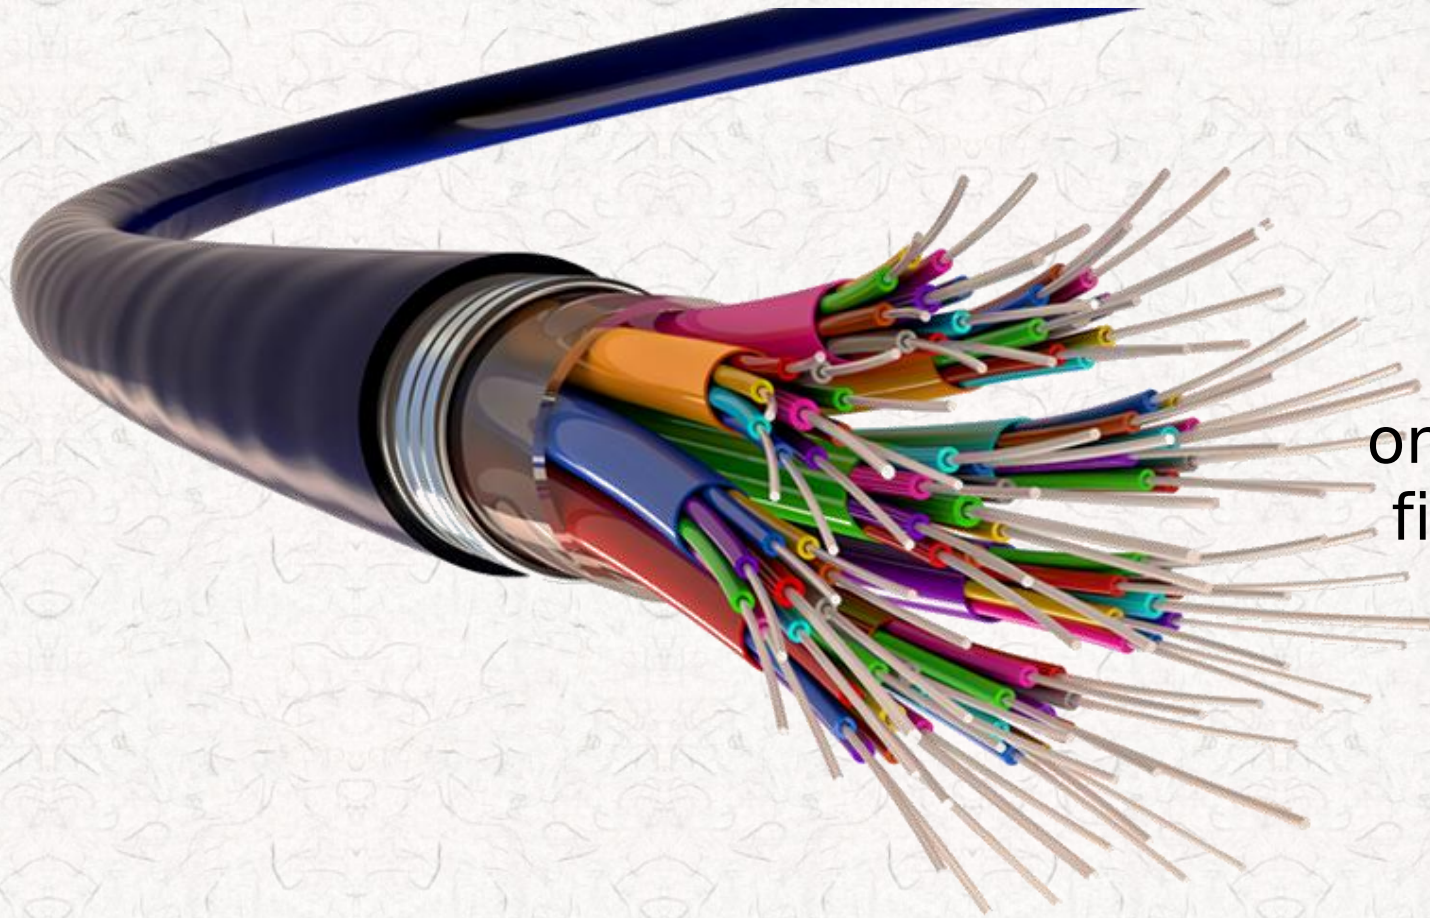

Coaxial Cables

Coaxial cable is a type of copper cable specially built with a metal shield and other components engineered to block signal interference

Fiber Optic Cables

one or more thin flexible fibres with a glass core

USB Cables

wiseGEEK

most popular cable types available, used mostly to connect computers to peripheral devices such as cameras, camcorders, printers, scanners, and more.

Thank
you!